

Three worlds that exist twice

The Last of Us. League of Legends and Arcane. Minecraft. Today, the film, the series and the show themselves. What does the crossing cost, and what does it buy?

10:00 • Content note first: mild peril; a 1968 talk show about pandemics; children grieving, bodies and the aftermath of violence; fantasy violence in one trailer.

Minecraft: the game, then the film

One minute of the game. Then the film from the moment Steve introduces himself: up to four minutes, stop before the Nether section. Whose hands are building?

10:10 • HBO Max on the classroom screen

Crossing, or contradiction?

A world whose whole identity is that you built it, adapted into a form where you watch somebody else build. Nobody is going to settle this for you.

10:16 • Many of you will build in Minecraft. This is about your work.

The Last of Us: the cold open

What does the audience know before the characters do? If you hold the game's opening, what survived, and what is gone?

10:42 • Four minutes, to the title card. HBO Max on the classroom screen.

Ten-minute break

Same company, same world

Awaken in full, then Arcane from its opening: up to four minutes, stop at the listed scene transition. A cinematic and an episode are different kinds of evidence. Name only what you can identify on screen.

11:16 • Netflix on the classroom screen

What did Arcane gain, and give up?

What audience expectation does each piece set up, and which frames or edits prove it?

11:30 • Talk

The three questions

One: what survived unchanged. Two: what had to be reinvented. Three: what is simply gone, and is its absence felt?

11:46 • One pair per team, in writing

Engine craft bridge

Clair Obscur. Lighting, camera and composition that look authored in an engine. Which techniques do you think you see, and what in the frame supports it?

12:00 • Homework: three sentences on what only an engine lets your project do

Last hands on the board

Count out loud. Say the palette, then check the screen. The room names the weakest image. Cut it.

12:15 to 12:45 • File due tomorrow, 5 PM

Two lines before you leave

One term you learned today and where you saw it. One thing you are still unsure of.
